Associate Vice President

Mr. Cooper is an Associate Vice President and leader of ARCADIS' Construction Claims Services in the Northeast United States. Mr. Cooper has over 20 years of construction experience, including the analysis and review of complex construction claims from the beginning stages through trial support and expert testimony. Mr. Cooper has led large-scale claims evaluation assignments of almost every type, including the evaluation of schedule impacts, cost impact analysis, mediation, claims negotiation and has been qualified as an expert on both horizontal and vertical type projects.

Mr. Cooper has a strong educational and technical background along with practical experience and knowledge of construction principles and management. His years of field and management experience have provided him with the ability to quickly identify and solve complex construction issues. Because of his background, Mr. Cooper also often gets engaged when disputes arise during construction to act as a real time problem solver.

Mr. Cooper is an accomplished public speaker and is often invited to speak at seminars on construction claims and managing projects more effectively. Prior to joining ARCADIS, from 1988 until 1997, Mr. Cooper spent his career as a project superintendent and engineer on high profile projects, several of which he was responsible for all aspects of construction.
